

HELD UP IN ARIZONA.

Train Stopped but Only $500 Secured by the Robbers.

ONE OF THE OUTLAWS SHOT.

Five Men in the Party—The Raid Not a Financial Success—Engineer Covered With a Winchester and the Conductor Driven Back on the Train—Sheriff Murphy Does Good Work.

TUCSON, A. T., Oct. 2.—Notwithstanding that a territorial law is in force which makes train robbery a capital offense a gang of desperate characters have renewed a line of business which it was believed would never again darken the criminal history of Arizona by holding up yesterday eight miles east of Tucson the eastbound Overland. The robbery was not a success financially. The robbers secured only about $500. One of the robbers now lies in the jail at Phoenix, suffering from five wounds inflicted by Sheriff Murphy of Maricopa county.

As the Overland was leaving Maricopa a brakeman discovered three men riding the blind baggage and ordered them to get off. They refused and before the brakeman knew what was going on he was looking down the barrels of three 6-shooters.

Covered With a Winchester. The engineer and fireman heard a shot and came to the conclusion that something was wrong and began slowing up. About this time a voice came from the window saying: "Hands up!" When the men in the cab turned about they saw a man with a face masked. He covered Holliday with his Winchester. The train proceeded to about a mile east of Maricopa where it came to a standstill, the robbers so ordering. Then two men emerged from a clump of bushes at the side of the road and joined the robbers. Conductor Martin alighted to ascertain the cause of the stoppage, and immediately two bullets whistled uncomfortably near his head and he heard the words: "Get back on the train or we will fill you with lead."

Duel to the Death Between Georgians at Cherrydale.

Place and Ulysses Aarum were the aspirants for the hand of a neighbor's daughter. They met after services in the little church and quarreled as to who should escort the girl home. As they both had pistols that appeal was taken at once, and firing began simultaneously. Place received three bullets and Aarum two, both men being fatally wounded.

WEBBERVILLE, Mich., Oct. 2.—The girls who work in the apple dryer factory here possess both beauty and sense. Adolph Freeman went to the dryer yesterday to create a favorable impression upon the susceptible maidens. The girls waited until the superintendent was out of the way and then they proceeded to have fun with Mr. Freeman. They chased him out into the yard, and with the assistance of the day boss, they threw him into a cistern. They left him there to get out the best he could.

A KANSAS CYCLONE.

NUMBER OF HOUSES AND OTHER BUILDINGS BLOWN DOWN.

Several Reported Killed—Crushed Like Eggs—Twelve Men Have Miraculous Escapes From Injury and Death—Valuable Steamer Sunk.

WICHITA, Kan., Oct. 2.—For 20 years Wichita has felt easy about cyclones on account of an Indian legend which said none ever visited or would visit it. The legend as well as the popular source of security were burst last night when a rain cloud from the west came in contact with a storm cloud from the south, both at once fusing and proceeding to "do business." The division headquarters and the Twelfth street depot of the Missouri Pacific road was the first building struck, and it was completely demolished, the roof striking the stable of Dr. Hupps, two blocks away, crushing it like an eggshell. Twelve men were in the building at the time, and, strange to say, none of them were hurt, although they were thrown about from one end to the other.

Pulled Up by the Roots.

The storm passed east about a mile, accomplishing all its destruction in less than two minutes. About 30 houses and barns were wrecked and probably 500 shade trees pulled up by the roots and strewn about in all directions. The path of the cyclone was about 50 feet wide. It progressed with a fearful roar and was a regular twister. Three children were hurt and two men were reported killed at police headquarters, but their names could not be ascertained. Owing to the terrible wind which accompanied the storm it is impossible yet to ascertain the full extent of the damage. Lightning struck a little boy named Fitzgibbons and killed him. Lightning also struck the Fifteenth street depot and car stables of the electric railway and demolished them. The Fairmount electric street railway wires were completely destroyed.

Roughly estimated, the loss in the city will be $50,000. The cyclone passed within 10 feet of Governor Lewelling's home.

INDICTMENTS FOUND.

Havemeyer, Searles and Seymour Must Answer in Court.

SUGAR SCHEDULE REHASHED

Cases to Come Up For Argument Oct. 12. Grand Jury's Report Voluminous—Comparative Statement of Governmental Receipts and Expenditures—Other Interesting Washington News.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—The grand jury yesterday afternoon brought in indictments against Henry O. Havemeyer and John E. Searles of the sugar trust and Allan L. Seymour of the stock brokerage firm of Seymour & Young, for refusing to answer questions put to them by the senate sugar trust investigating committee. An indictment was also brought against Mr. McCartney, of the firm of Carson & McCartney, this last, however, merely being to perfect a previous report. All of the cases will come up for argument on demurrers Oct. 12. The indictments each cover 28 pages of large typewritten sheets. The history of the sugar schedule of the tariff bill is rehearsed in the contents. These indictments differ somewhat from the others from the fact that the pertinency of the questions are somewhat further removed and that two members of the investigating committee held that the questions which Havemeyer and Searles refused to answer were not pertinent. The questions requested the specific amounts contributed in the different states to campaign funds and one point urged was that these contributions were not to national campaign funds.

INTERNATIONAL QUESTION.

One Feature of the Sugar Schedule Causing Friction.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—An international question involving the United States and Germany has been raised by that feature of the new tariff law which inspired the most domestic trouble—the sugar schedule. The German government, through its ambassador, has made a strong protest to the secretary of state against that clause of the act which imposes an additional duty of 1-10 of a cent per pound on sugars imported from those governments which pay an export bounty on the article to their producers. It is held by the German government that this feature of the new tariff act is more oppressive in its action against the sugar producers of that country than any other, and violates the spirit of the treaty arrangements between the two governments.

OVERRULED.

Judge Jenkins' Famous Strike Injunction Does Not Stand.

CHICAGO, Oct. 2.—Judge Jenkins' famous strike injunction was overruled yesterday by the United States circuit court of appeals and the cause was remanded with directions to strike out from the restraining order of the court the clause which aroused the country when the order was issued and which resulted in the Boatner investigating committee of congress.

The intervenors representing the leading labor organizations of the country asked that two sections of the injunction be eliminated. The court of appeals decided that no court could compel a man or a body of men from quitting individually or in a body the service of an employer. The court said that Judge Jenkins had exceeded his powers when he enjoined the employees of the receivers of the Northern Pacific Railroad company from quitting the service of said receivers, with or without notice, so as to cripple the property or prevent or hinder the operation of said railroad. It held, however, that the section should stand in which the men were prohibited "from combining and conspiring to quit with or without notice, the service of said receivers, with the object and intent of crippling the property in their custody or embarrassing the operation of said railroad."

The decision is considered by the lawyers as one of the most important opinions delivered in the United States in a decade. It defines the statutes before the law of labor organizations in their conduct of strikes and affirms the power of courts of equity to interfere by injunction when there is reason to believe that the law will be violated.

LUCKY PRISONER.

William Farrow Falls Heir to $32,000 and Is Released.

In the afternoon he stepped out a free man and heir to a fortune of $32,000. About five weeks ago Farrow was arrested at Olean for stealing three bottles of whisky. He was brought to Buffalo and set to work in the penitentiary. He had served less than a week when word came from Chicago of the death of Elizabeth Walsh, of that city, his aunt. In her will Mrs. Walsh left Farrow a bequest of $18,000 in cash and $14,000 in real estate. Some friends of the prisoner placed his case in the hands of an attorney who at once set to work to find some flaw in the commitment. He succeeded in making out a case. Farrow was discharged.

LOCKED IN A TOOLBOX.

Unusual Experience of a Tramp in the South—Nearly Drowned.

ATLANTA, Oct. 2.—A tramp brought to this city from Montgomery via the canal-belt train had an unusual experience. He and a companion secreted themselves on the tender. When the train left Montgomery his companion, a smaller man than himself, took a berth in the toolbox, from which he was driven by his more muscular companion. When the train was a few miles out, angered by his ejection, the smaller tramp fastened his companion securely in the toolbox, and shortly afterward was himself put off the train, but gave no intimation of the contents of the toolbox. When the train stopped at several times on the way to take on water the imprisoned man was nearly drowned by water leaking on him. When the train reached this point and the toolbox was opened the victim was nearly dead.

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 2.—A romance involving the happiness of two young lovers had a singularly pathetic final scene here last night. The hero was a brave fireman and the heroine a beautiful young girl. Yesterday afternoon the steamer State of New York, lying at the wharf here, took fire. Among the first to respond to the alarm was hook and ladder company No. 1, of which William Heiser is a member. As the truck rounded a corner Heiser was thrown off and a wheel passed over his body, crushing his chest. He was taken to the hospital and when informed that he could not live summoned his sweetheart, Annie McGittrick, to whom he was to have been married in a month. The dying fireman could scarcely speak above a whisper as he expressed a wish to make Annie his wife before he died. Friends hunted up the probate court clerk, and at a late hour he was found, a license was secured, and Father Vahey and the parents of the young girl and the fireman's mother hastened to his bedside. There was no time to be lost, for Heiser was growing weaker every moment. As the ceremony was about to begin the injured man lapsed into unconsciousness. The doctor waited for a return of reason, but in vain. He felt the patient's pulse and announced to the guests that he was dead. The young girl threw herself on the dead body of her lover and clung to it until he weeping away.

COLOR LINE DRAWN.

Brooklynites Seeking to Keep a Negro Family Out of a Fashionable Quarter.

The street is one of Brooklyn's most aristocratic thoroughfares. The residents determined to freeze Mr. Thomas out, and went about it in a practical way. George M. Henderson, a real estate dealer who owns the house, was offered a big bonus to sell the house to a syndicate of property owners, but Mr. Thomas had already secured the house by paying a deposit. The only hope left now for the irate property owners is to buy off Mr. Thomas. Mr. Thomas is very wealthy and is college bred. His son is a graduate of a New York college and his daughter is attending a well known seminary. The family is now at Saratoga. At Saratoga he is one of the most highly respected citizens. Billy Wilson in London.

Of course you've heard the tidings that have flashed across the sea, They're dining Billy Wilson where everything is "free"; The Prince he pats him on the back and toasts him up and down, They've granted him the freedom of their blasted London Town, And even Jack, the Ripper, recking with the gutter's slime, He is vowed to see that Billy has a high old time.

They thank him for the spindles that are silent everywhere, They bless him for the hungry cries that rend the Autumn air, They praise him for the pitching of a thousand Loxie camps, They toast him for the making of our multitude of tramps; Aye, everywhere they seek him out in Queen Victoria's clime, Determined that our Bill shall have a high old time.

The British lion lifts his tail when he our Billy sees, And whispers: "Dear old comrade, you may twist it all you please; You've tried to ruin our rivals'neath the banner of the stars, You've crippled Uncle Sam more than twenty bloody wars; We'll banquet you in pleasure and we'll write you up in rhyme, Till you return I'll see you have a high old time."

The freemen of his district will be voting by and by, A shattered Wilson bill will soon be sailing toward the sky; 'Tis the winds of next November as they whistle cold and wild, The dinner out in England will not know his free-trade child, For the men of West Virginia, heroes true to Freedom's clime, Will see that Billy Wilson has a high old time.

THE more the people of Putnam cogitate the more they are determined to repudiate democracy.

A VOTE this year for Messrs. Hays, Hunt, Johns, Macy, Shepherd, Downs and Owen, all bustling republican candidates, will be no mistake.

THE Terre Haute city school board is being severely condemned by the public and press over there, especially the Express, for excluding newspapers from their meetings and giving out only such information as they choose. The Terre Haute public is right. Their school board is bringing odium on themselves when they seek to keep their acts in the dark. In great contrast to their action is the Greencastle school board. They invite newspaper men and are always ready to give out information.

THE many friends of George W. Hanna all over the county are proud of the gallant race he is making for the legislature. Mr. Hanna was the unanimous choice of his party for the legislative race, and many democrats are outspoken in his interest. Mr. Hanna should be triumphantly elected.

B. F. THOMPSON, the man who has been nominated for county commissioner by the democrats, and whose son celebrated his father's success by immediately applying for a liquor license and getting the same without trouble, is having hard work explaining away his record as trustee of his township. It is said, and by prominent democrats, that Thompson so managed that little township office that his administration was the worse exhibition of incompetency ever made in Putnam county, with all its bad democratic legislation. Democrats all over the county are realizing that they made a mess of it when they failed to prevent the ring from foisting on them the names of Thompson and Talbott.

It is an exceedingly easy matter to interview disgruntled democrats these days. They will talk and propose to have their way. They are down on ring candidates and on ring methods and are not adverse to so saying. In a lengthy interview with one this week he said he was tired, and that he proposed to vote in a tired way; in fact, no democratic patent medicine could cure that tired feeling for him. He was very sore at a member of a prominent family that is now asking office, a family that has drawn $90,000 in cold cash from the county treasury, and is now asking for a legislative office from the county. He said a democratic ticket without a member of that family on its roll would be a sight that he and his brethren would relish, but the ring seemed bent on keeping this family in power, and that democrats all over the county proposed repudiating it. In a spirit of all fairness in politics this outspoken democrat is right.

THE G. O. P. is decidedly alive. Yesterday Connecticut was swept by a republican land slide and in the local elections democracy was given a black eye. This is another straw. We wonder how far south the democratic papers will go on Saturday to find a victory to offset this. If they keep up these southern excursions after consolation they will strike Guatemala ere long.

WASHINGTON LETTER

THE LATEST POLITICAL GOSSIP FROM THE CAPITAL.

Interesting Doings of Congress and a Dish of Spice Here and There as Seen By Our Special Correspondent—Notes, Incidents, Etc.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1, 1894.

The more the administration crowd thinks of the nomination of Senator Hill for governor of New York the less they like it. Publicly it is difficult to get them to talk about it, further than to utter the usual platitudes about their being in favor of the nominee, and peculiar circumstances surrounding the case which are not understood outside of the state; but privately they do not hesitate to say that the whole business was a put up job, for the purpose of making Hill, who was only a short time ago in danger of being publicly read out of the democratic party by his fellow democratic senators because of his opposition to the tariff bill, the leader of the democratic party. His nomination has already proved decidedly embarrassing to the managers of the democratic congressional campaign. They have been sending out literature in defense of the tariff bill, and especially the income tax clause of it, and here is Hill, who voted against the tariff bill, nominated for governor of the great state of New York, on a platform that specifically condemns the income tax. They don't know what to do. If they shout for Hill they offend Mr. Cleveland, who will control the federal patronage until March 4, 1897, and if they don't they offend Hill, who may be the democratic nominee for the presidency two years hence. The republicans, while conceding the truth of Dan Lammont's comment, that "Hill is a vote-getter," are pleased with the nomination, because they are confident that it will result in the election of Mr. Morton and making the electoral vote of New York certain for the republican nominee in 1896. They fully agree with the administration men in believing that Hill's nomination was a put up job, and that its author was David B. Hill, but they think the administration ought to be glad of it, as Hill will be defeated and thus eliminated as a factor in national politics. The administration men would be glad enough of the opportunity to assist in the eliminating process were it not for their knowledge that if New York elects a republican governor this year it will almost certainly go republican in the presidential election.

About the smallest piece of political work ever done by any administration was the resumption in a small way of the coining of silver dollars, in order that the coins might be used by stump speakers and personal workers among the more ignorant voters of the south and west to convince them that the Cleveland administration was so friendly to silver that it was still coining silver dollars. Of course this little trick will not fool intelligent newspaper readers, who know that Mr. Cleveland is the most bitter opponent of silver who ever sat in the president's chair, but from information received here these few 1894 silver dollars are fooling some voters. However, they are mostly in sections where the populists, not republicans, are injured. Still, it is a piece of dirty work.

Secretary Carlisle evidently did not greatly enjoy his visit to Mr. Cleveland. Perhaps the bad news he carried of the democratic congressional outlook was not well received. At any rate, the secretary, who is ordinarily a man of even temper and pleasant disposition, has been in a terribly bad humor ever since his return. It is said that Mr. Cleveland vetoed several propositions submitted to him by Mr. Carlisle concerning treasury business, and that one of them was the proposed formulation of rules for the payment of a rebate upon imported alcohol used in the arts. Whether this be true or not your correspondent does not undertake to say, but it is borne out by the semi-official announcement that the treasury department will not undertake to put into effect the clause of the tariff law authorizing such rebate without further congressional legislation.

The democratic congressional campaign committee contained a lot of thoroughly disgusted individuals when the cabled report of that fool speech made before the London chamber of commerce by Representative Wilson, of West Virginia, reached Washington. Some of them privately admitted that any man who had little enough judgment to make such a speech in a foreign country ought not to be elected to congress, and few of them now think that he even had a chance to be elected. The speech is regarded as such excellent republican campaign material that a committee from Mr. Wilson's district came to Washington as quick as they could get here after seeing the cabled synopsis of the speech, to ask the republican congressional committee to secure a full stenographic report of it for general distribution in the district. They wish every voter in the district to know the unAmerican language which was so loudly applauded by the men whose interests are all anti-American, and the republican committee will aid in carrying out their wishes. Every voter in Wilson's district will be given an opportunity to read the speech.

THE post-mortem examination held this morning over the remains of Mrs. H. C. Reeves revealed that the deceased was a sufferer from organic disease of the heart, Bright's disease, induration of the spleen, liver and cystic degeneration of the pancreas. Drs. Hawkins, Hanna, Smythe, Baker and Hunt were present at the examination.

A VACILLATING RECORD.

The Crawfordsville Journal Has Its Say About a Mi-ft Candidate.

The BANNER TIMES has had a few words occasionally about the roundabout dickerings changes made by the democratic candidate for joint-representative of the district of Putnam, Clay and Montgomery counties. The republican papers of the district are thoroughly posted on his vacillating record and are showing it up in their way in a beautiful manner. The Clay County Enterprise has spoken and the Crawfordsville Journal comes out with some solid chunks of truth as follows:

Hon. Delana E. Williamson is now posing as a democrat and asking the support of that party in an effort to be sent as a representative to the state legislature from Putnam, Clay and Montgomery counties. In early life Mr. Williamson posed as a democrat and was sent to the state legislature as a representative from Clay county. He served one term in that capacity, and when he asked the people of Clay to honor him with a second term, they defeated him by an overwhelming majority. After this he sought recognition from his party at various times but always failed, and in 1861 he abandoned his democracy. The republican party being in the ascendancy in the state he identified himself with that party, and immediately asked for, and received from them, the office of attorney-general of the state. He held this office at the hands of the republicans for three consecutive terms, and was loud in his profession of loyalty to the republican party, and severe in his denunciation of democrats, advising the people to "bury the dead ones face down, in order that they might scratch downwards instead of upwards." After his three terms as attorney-general, he sought the nomination for congress and was defeated by John Hanna. He 1888 he sought and received the republican nomination for judge of the 13th judicial circuit, and was defeated by Judge McGregor in the election. This seemed to completely sour him and in the summer of 1892 he wrote a letter to his bosom friend, Geo. Knight, of Brazil, denouncing his thirty years of allegiance to republican principles. He now claims he never was a republican at heart, but has always been a democrat—which is equivalent to saying that for thirty years he was an ardent hypocrite, and abusing the confidence of the people. When in 1861 the republicans were in power and he thought his political future best with them, he abandoned his former friends and came to see the republicans and immediately asked for office. In 1892, when he believed the democratic star in the ascendant, he abandons his thirty years of rabid republicanism, turns over to the democracy and in two years has his plate as usual up for office. Can the democracy of the district swallow this mess of hypocrisy and inconsistency? He is now about 72 years old, and somewhat in his dotage, and this may account why he is willing to accept the nomination of such an office at his advanced time of life.

The Van's Great Run.

The Vandalia demonstrated yesterday that it had not reached its maximum speed limit in the shortening of the time of Trains 20 and 21 between Indianapolis and St. Louis. Coming east, yesterday, Train 20, on its new schedule, left St. Louis fifteen minutes late, lost eight minutes by a hot box under the dining car at Vandalia, and reached Indianapolis two minutes ahead of time, making the run among the fastest ever made with eight cars over the Vandalia from St. Louis to Indianapolis.—Indianapolis Journal.

The post-mortem examination held this morning over the remains of Mrs. H. C. Reeves revealed that the deceased was a sufferer from organic disease of the heart, Bright's disease, induration of the spleen, liver and cystic degeneration of the pancreas. Drs. CARPENTERSVILLE.

Thursday night a small wreck occurred at Roachdale. An I. D. & W. train crashed into a Monon freight, wrecking several cars. Again on Friday night a freight was wrecked, one and a half miles north of here on the Monon, by the breaking of an axle. Six or seven cars were broken up, among them a car load of beer kegs, all empty. The wreck train was out here two days cleaning things up.

Wm. Davis' house was entered and robbed of $16.50 Friday night.

Will Hanna's mare and buggy were stolen from the hitching rack at Roachdale Saturday night. The rig was tracked to Crawfordsville, but have learned nothing further of the whereabouts of the parties. The mare was a fine animal and valued very highly by Will.

Harvey Moreland is on the sick list. Lou Collins and wife visited Geo. Pickel and family at Bainbridge Sunday.

Charlie took Orie's girl out driving Sunday afternoon, and there is going to be, well, who knows, a duel perhaps. There was a party at August Anderson's Saturday night.

Ladoga disappointed the boys Saturday by not coming to play ball.

Clarence Smith, of Bainbridge, was in town Saturday.

Jesse Coffman, of the Walnut Knobs, was in town Sunday, driving around in company with some of our fair damsels. Our town has in J. W. Hillis one of the best mechanics outside of Indianapolis. He has completed several kinds of difficult jobs this summer.

Mr. Boyd, of Russellville, our new teacher, is quite a success.

John Pickel has traded his mustache to Will Anderson for an interest in the second nine ball club.

Miss Lura Cline is visiting friends at Russellville.

Did you read Wilson's speech at the banquet in London? So America is to open her doors to England, and the American farmer and workman are to surrender to the Briton? Well, we will look after that in November, and while Wilson is tickling the ears of John Bull the workmen will quietly vote to lay the democratic party on the shelf.

Rev. Williams, the new preacher of the M. E. church, preached his first sermon here Sunday night. He is an able and eloquent speaker and is spoken of very highly by the people of this place. He will fill his appointment here again next Sunday night.

In dodging back and forth from one depot to another the pace is a fast one in order to make calls and deliver passengers. In addition to this are the morning trains on each road occurring about the same hour and the night trains, seemingly run in by the dozen. The Monon arrives at 1:20 and 2:47 a. m., the Big Four at 12:20, 12:58 and 2:50
a. m. and the Vandalia 12:26, 2:28 and 3:32 a. m. So the night lads also hustle.

An item is current to the effect that the supreme court has decided that a man who wants to go faster than another who is ahead of him on the road has a right to pass. If he is prevented by another and an accident happens because of the latter's interference

the obstructionist is responsible for the damages. No man in the eyes of the law has a right to infringe on the rights of a neighbor or to check the latter in passing.
Whether this is a decision or not it is common sense.

Ira Fisher, of Colfax, has returned to enter 1900.

Miss Flora Bridges has returned from Michigan, where she has been visiting the past month, and will enter the senior class.

Misses Smith and Griffith, of
I. U., are visiting Miss Harrison.
They are on their way to enter school there this year.

A meeting of the athletic board was held yesterday afternoon in Biddle hall. The board was reorganized. E. E. Schnepf was elected president, also two directors from prep.—Claude Boyd and Will Burnett.

The Alpha Phis gave a reception to a number of their gentlemen friends last night at the Harris house. Progressive games were the order of the evening, and a splendid time is reported.

Great interest is manifested in the approaching athletic concert, which occurs in Meharry hall tomorrow evening. The excellent program to be furnished should certainly prove a big attraction for all. Let us support the venture loyally, for athletics are deserving of it.

Kappa Kappa Gamma gave a most delightful reception to more than a hundred invited guests in the beautiful parlors of the Nelson home on east Seminary street last evening. Socially this was one of the best events of the season.
Golden rod on nasturtiums profusely decorated the rooms. A conundrum contest furnished much amusement and served to put the conversation on an easier basis and more informal relations. Excellent music was rendered by Messrs.
Jones, Starr and Gilbert, and Miss Jean Nelson. Miss Starr pleased her hearers by several choice readings. Splendid refreshments were served. The affair was a decided success, and the Kappas surely understand the art of entertaining.

A STRANGE THEFT.

By CHARLES B. LEWIS (M. QUAD).

(Copyright, 1894, by Charles B. Lewis.)

At the age of 20 I was cashier in the retail dry goods house of Hope, Brown & Co., and in taking the position I was of course introduced to the tellers and other officials of the national bank with which we did business. Our house had a large trade and always carried a fair balance with the bank, and in addition to this I had a few thousand dollars' deposit in my own name. After a while I came to know the president and several of the directors, and now and then had a noonday lunch with the cashier. I can say without egotism that I stood pretty high in the estimation of both the firm and the bank, and that another six months would have given me a financial interest in the former had it not been for the adventure I am about to relate.

I may tell you, to make things more clear, that I was a steady young man, given to pass the evenings with my books in my own room or in the society of a few good friends. I was not given to drink or card playing, and, taken all in all, was as steady going as could be asked of a young fellow. As cashier of the firm, having an office in rear of the store, I seldom came in contact with any of the customers unless a check was presented in payment for goods. One day after I had been with the firm for over two years a clerk sent me in a check drawn on the bank we did business with. Its face value was $30, and the purchase was only 90 cents. It was drawn to the order of and indorsed by George H. Bell, and my duty was to telephone to the bank to learn if the check was O. K. This involved a delay of a few minutes, and while I was waiting for an answer Mr. Bell came back to my desk to see what the trouble was. He did not come to complain of the delay, but, on the contrary, to excuse himself for offering the check under the circumstances. He was a fine looking, well dressed man of 30 and rendered himself so pleasant and agreeable that I took quite a liking to him. He asked about trade, touched on the weather and politics and casually mentioned that he was from Chicago and thinking of establishing business in our town.

The message from the bank was to the effect that Mr. Bell's check was all right, and when he departed with his change we had a pleasant good day for each other. Three days later I met him in the restaurant where I took my lunch, and a few days after that he called at the store to ask me several questions about business matters. After that I always found him at the restaurant at noon, and it naturally came about that we got on a friendly footing. He told me in confidence that he was looking to establish himself in the gentlemen's furnishing line, but was waiting for a certain building to be completed. I had no doubt that he spoke the truth, but had no great interest in his movements. I did not invite him to my rooms, nor did he ask me to call on him at his hotel, but one evening, after I had known him for about three months, he knocked at my door. He desired to ask me a few questions on strictly business matters, and of course I invited him in. He remained for a couple of hours, and when he went away I had the best kind of an opinion of him. On the following day he walked from the store to the bank with me as I made my regular deposit, and we chatted pleasantly together at the receiving teller's window. On that occasion he drew a check for a small amount, and the paying teller promptly cashed it. In the course of the next few weeks Bell met me on the street or in the bank half a dozen times, and at the bank it was plain to all that we were on a friendly footing.

If he thought had come to me that Bell had a game to work, I should have dismissed it on the instant. Should he present another check at the store, no matter how small the face value, I should have telephoned, as before. My instructions were to do this in every case where the financial standing of the party was not vouched for. Had some one warned me that he was a sharper I should not have feared him, as he could get nothing out of me or the firm. It never occurred to me that he was anything else than what he had casually described himself to be.

The store he designed to occupy when completed was half a mile off my route of travel, and though I knew it was building I had no interest in the matter beyond occasionally inquiring if things were going to his satisfaction. At lunch one noon Bell told me that he expected to leave for New York in a day or two to purchase stock, and I jokingly replied that I hoped to be his first customer after the store was opened. He appeared at the bank at the usual hour, and this time he checked out his balance, which was about $1,000. While he was getting his money we talked of his store and intended business trip, and I introduced him to a hardware merchant named Watterson, with whom I had long been acquainted.

It was a distance of four blocks from our store to the bank. The bank closed at 3, and it was my invariable rule, in order to avoid the rush at closing, to leave the store at 2:30. The amount of my daily deposit depended, of course, on the state of trade and collections. Sometimes I had several thousand dollars in checks and cash and sometimes only a few hundreds. On the day after Bell checked out his balance he entered the store just as I was ready to leave for the bank. He excused himself by asking some question about a New York house, and we walked out of the store together and headed for the bank. As we entered the institution I stepped to one of the desks to look over my checks and cash and see that all was correct, and Bell followed me to finish something he was saying. We were almost in front of the paying teller's window, but with our backs toward him, and there were half a dozen people doing business. All of a sudden Bell crowded close up to me, and in a voice scarcely above a whisper—a voice which hissed and grated and had a menace in it—he said:

"I have a derring in my hand with this handkerchief, and if you cry out or make a move I'll bore you through the heart!"

For a few seconds I was stunned. My first impression was that some one was talking to some one else behind us, and I was about to turn around to see when Bell's elbow pressed my side, and he said in the same tones as before:

"Mind what I am saying to you! I am a desperate man and willing to take desperate chances! Do as I tell you and all will be well. Kick up a row, and I will kill you on the spot!"

I glanced at him and noted with amazement the great change of facial expression. He was, as I have told you, rather good looking, with a habitual smile, which told of anything except evil intentions. His mild blue eyes were now the color of polished steel, and his jaw was hard set and betrayed his determination. I wasn't sure whether I was awake or dreaming when he reached out for my book and currency and checks and said:

"I'll take charge of the greenbacks, and you can deposit the checks. How much currency do you make out?"

"There's upward of $4,000," I replied, and to this day I remember that my voice sounded so strange that I wondered who had spoken.

"Not as much as you have had on some other days, but a fairly good haul," said Bell as he laid the checks aside. "Now, then, do you understand the situation?"

I stared at him without answering. It had come to me that I had fallen and been badly hurt, and I was trying hard to figure it out.

"It is just this: I want this money, and I want the money you have on deposit in your own name. You'd better wake up and collect your wits or something will happen!"

I made a tremendous effort to shake off the queer feeling that I had, and I came out of it exactly as one does from the effects of laughing gas. All at once I was fully alive to the situation. Bell was closely watching me, and as he noted the change he said:

"Be sensible now. You can't afford to sacrifice your life for a few thousand dollars."

"What is it you want?" I queried in a whisper.

"Just this: I want the firm's currency here, and I want you to draw your check for what money you have in bank. You are astonished, of course, but let me tell you that I have been planning this affair for months, and if there's any slip in it I'll shoot you dead in your tracks and take my chances of getting away."

"Are you George H. Bell?" I asked, still doubting myself.

"Of course I am," he replied.

"And you mean to rob me?"

"Yes, call it robbery. You have several thousand dollars to your credit here. Fill out this check and step to the teller's window with me and hand me over the money."

"But I won't do it! I'll call for"—"Fool, do you want to die right here?" he hissed as he crowded me closer. "Feel the muzzle of that derring pressed into your side! Raise one yell, and I'll kill you! Take the pen and fill out the check."

You may call it cowardice and boast of what you would have done in such a contingency, and I shall enter into no dispute with you. There was a menace in the man's tones to remind one of the growl of a wounded tiger. A glance at his face revealed desperation and determination. In my own mind I was perfectly satisfied that he had nerved himself up for the emergency and meant all he said. I was all a-tremble as I took the pen, and it was half a minute before I could remember the amount to my credit. I finally filled in the amount, signed and backed the check, and as I blotted the fresh ink Bell said:

"I shall go with you to the window. If you give the teller the slightest sign that anything is wrong, you are a dead man! Come on!"

That I was trembling and pale faced goes without dispute. The teller stared at me as I handed in the check, but Bell was talking and laughing, and the rush was on, and so no particular attention was paid to me. The money was handed out in four or five packages, and as we returned to the desk I handed it over to Bell. He stuffed it into his bosom, as he had the money belonging to the firm, and reaching for my hand he pleasantly remarked:

"After I am out of the way you can deposit your checks as usual. I took you from the first to be a sensible young man, and I am glad that I have not been disappointed. Under the circumstances the firm cannot raise much of a row, and, as for your own money, perhaps I may some day return it, with interest. I am now off. Goodby!"

I shall secure your contempt by admitting that after he disappeared through the door I stood there for several minutes looking after him and wondering what it was all about. When I did bestir myself and give the alarm, he had secured a long start. Everything occurred exactly as I have told you, but nobody would believe me. The paying teller and others had seen us talking confidentially, and there was my check for my own money. My employers listened to my story, denounced it as a falsehood, and but for a relative of mine stepping in to make good the loss I should have been sent to prison for embezzlement.

The detectives who were summoned within half an hour after Bell walked out of the bank smiled at my story and refused to take up the case. I blamed everybody then, being half crazed with distress, but later on I came to fully realize how silly and foolish my statements must have appeared. The idea of a man being held up in a bank and bulldozed into drawing and presenting his own check simply excited ridicule. When my relative offered to pay the detectives a liberal sum for running Bell to earth, they plainly told him that no such man could ever be found. He was found, however, and you'll be interested in knowing when and where.

A few months after the robbery in the bank I left for the west, but it was nearly three years before I located at Virginia City as local express agent for Wells, Fargo & Co. I had been there about eight months when one of the Madison river stages came in one night with three passengers who had been severely injured by an upset. One of them was indeed thought to be dead, but before I reached the hotel where he was living he had revived somewhat, and the doctor hoped to pull him through. That man was George H. Bell. He had changed some, but I recognized him almost at once, and as soon as I spoke to him he called me by name. For ten days his chances of recovery were good. Then the case took a bad turn, and at the end of the fourth day he died. I did not denounce him on sight, as you may think I should have done. He had worked my downfall, but somehow I had never even borne him a grudge. He was strangely magnetic, and he exercised a strange influence over me. On the third day of his arrival he sent for me and inquired all about what followed the affair in the bank. I gave him a truthful account, and he expressed regret over his action. I saw him twice after that, but the subject was not referred to. He was dead when I saw him again, as I had to go over to Bannock City on business, but he had left a will bequeathing me $20,000 in cash and mining stock, and also a full and properly attested confession as to the robbery. He had lived in Gallatin for three years under another name, and as far as any one knew was an honest man. He robbed me and made me an outcast for years, but he paid the debt twice over and restored me to the confidence of honest men in his dying hour. I therefore remember him neither as a robber nor an honest fellow, but as a man of such nerve and coolness as to provoke admiration even from a victim of his plots and plans.

Carving Is an Accomplishment.

To be able to carve a joint or a fowl properly and gracefully is by no means a slight accomplishment. In the early B. C.'s carving was taught in the Roman schools. Of late years the Italians have taken to slipping yard lengths of macaroni down their beautiful throats, and carving is almost a lost art in the kingdom. The French are the masters of cutlery athletics. At the New York societies of French cooking the officers do not hesitate to take pupils who wish to learn the gastronomic use of good steel. These lessons go by favor, but it is most interesting to get into the club-room and watch an exquisite, with upturned mustachios and polished hands, play with a bleeding redhead or a juicy poulet—just to oblige a friend.—New York World.

Both Ways Across the United States.

The greatest length of the United States from east to west is on the parallel of 43 degrees north latitude—that is to say, from Eastport, Me., on the Atlantic coast, to a point on the Pacific exactly 52½ miles due west of Salem, Or. On the above parallel it is exactly 2,768 miles long. Its greatest width from north to south is on the ninety-seventh degree of longitude, which extends through the United States in an almost direct line from Pembina, N. D., to Point Isabel, Tex. The greatest width is 1,611½ miles.—St. Louis Republic.

On the Deep Shell.

Here is a pointer for you: When you order oysters at your club or restaurant, tell the waiter that you want them served on "the deep shell." One shell of an oyster is flat, and another is round. If served on the flat shell, all the juice is lost, but when served on the deep shell the juice and flavor are retained.

Crusoe's Queer Finds.

It has been said that the first persons seen by Robinson Crusoe on his desert island were a great swell on shore and a little cove running inland. The most remarkable geographical feature was the big bluff put up by the cannibals.—Boston Transcript.

High Noon.

Time's finger on the dial of my life
Points to high noon. And yet the half spent day Leaves less than half remaining! For the dark Black shadows of the grave engulf the end.

To those who burn the candle to the stick
The sputtering socket yields but little light.
Long life is sadder than an early death.
We cannot count on raveled threads of age
Whereof to weave a fabric. We must use
The warp and woof the ready present yields And toil while daylight lasts. When I be-think

How brief the past, the future, still more brief, Calls on to action—action! Not for me
Is time for retrospection or for dreams;
Not time for self laudation or remorse.
Have I done nobly? Then I must not let Dead yesterday unborn tomorrow shame.
Have I done wrong? Well, let the bitter taste
Of fruit that turned to ashes on my lip
Be my reminder in temptation's hour
And keep me silent when I would condemn.
Sometimes it takes the acid of a sin
To cleanse the clouded windows of our souls
So pity may shine through them. Looking back.

My faults and errors seem like stepping stones
That led the way to knowledge of the truth
And made me value virtue. Sorrows shine
In rainbow colors over the gulf of years
Where lie forgotten pleasures. Looking forth
Out to the western sky, still bright with noon,
I feel well spurred and booted for the strife
That ends not till Nirvana is attained.

Battling with fate, with men and with myself,
Up the steep summit of my life's forenoon,
Three things I learned—three things of precious worth—
To guide and help me down the western slope,
I have learned how to pray and to tell and save;
To pray for courage to receive what comes,
Knowing what comes to be divinely sent;
To toil for universal good, since thus,
And only thus, can good come unto me;
To save by giving whatsoever I have To those who have not. This alone is gain.
—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

Killed by Tramps.

TACOMA, Wash., Oct. 2.—The country about Payallup is greatly excited over the cold blooded murder of Constable Fry. Two hundred citizens, fully armed, surrounded the two tramps who committed the murder in the thick woods near McMillan. The fugitives opened fire and Deputy Sheriff Moore was shot through the side and is not expected to live. Every point of escape is guarded.

Strikers Dismissed.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 2.—Six American Railway union strikers on the Cincinnati Southern railway, who were arrested last July on a charge of contempt of court by disobeying a restraining order issued by Judge Taft and whose cases were continued, were yesterday dismissed by Judge Taft in the United States court at Covington, Ky. They are Frank Parrell, B. Polkin, E. Glenn, Moses Singleton, Pat Doody and Max Burkhardt.

Anti-Japanese.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—The Times publishes letters from Yokohama bearing date of Aug. 24, stating that Japan is preparing to increase her army in Korea to 100,000 men. The intentions of the government as proclaimed by the native press are to crush the Chinese army in Korea and march on Peking, where a claim for a large indemnity will be made and the cession on the island of Formosa demanded.

Southeast Conference.

SHELBYVILLE, Ind., Oct. 2.—Bishop Hurst, yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock, closed the forty-fifth and last session of the Southeast Indiana conference. The following were appointed presiding elders: Connersville district, C. C. Edwards; Indianapolis district, J. W. Dashiell; Jeffersonville district, E. A. Campbell; Moore's Hill district, E. L. Dolph.

Students Fight.

SPRINGFIELD, O., Oct. 2.—At Wittenberg college yesterday the classes of '97 and '98 had a terrific fight, in which Fred Waltz was knocked senseless and badly injured. A dozen others have black eyes, bruises and cuts. The fight arose over an effigy placed in the tower.

Robbed by a Tramp.

MONETT, Mo., Oct. 2.—Last night an unknown tramp enticed Conrad Upperman, an aged tailor of Monett, into the woods one mile west of here, bound his hands, beat him about the head, robbed him of his watch and chain and money and then left him lying unconscious.

Ran Away and Were Killed.
